their bearte were all willing to witness the billing, while the shot from the cappon were flying around.

But nearer the rattle and storm of the battle Approached the Civilians, who came to a show; he seriable thunder tilled them with wonder and trambling, and quaking with fear of the fee.

The bell's esg shells thing, the grouns of the dring, Some bankshed their pleasure and reined their fun, There was terrible langhter—blood ran like water— When Civilians were pic-nicking down at Bull Ren. Their forms eldermanic are shaken with panic, When the Black Horse sweep down like a cloud on th plain; They can beiter skeller, their fat bodies sweller— They by from the field thickly strown with the slain. Oh, sows me from their rage toh, give me my carriage.

The Civalians cryout at the sound of each gan;
No longer they're frisky, with brands and whisky,
No longer they seek for a fight at Bull Run !

"Yes, my landlard wanted to raise my rent. I resisted—he insisted. I grew angry, and Ab, well, take back your lesse." "You are right, I will take it back."

The next day Lefort had still the long face and the grieved air of the previous day. He had wished to resume his lease. But it was too late. The apartment was let for a term of nine years. Lefort must move in the month of October. His landlord informed him, however, in an obliging manner, that the person who was to succeed him would not arrive from the country until the middle of November, and that he had all that time to seek an apartment to sult him; only Lefort must leave empty a part of the suite of rooms to store the furniture of his successor. Lefort consented to this joyfulty, and the farniture of the new tenant was brought in. Meantime Decamps, who saw him still so sorrewful at having to quit his rooms, said to him one day : "There is perhaps some way to arrange with your new successor," "I do not know him; and don't wish to try to make a bargain." Show me his furniture," said Decamps, " and I can guess what sort of man ho is " Lefort conducted Decamps into the rooms where the furniture of the new tenant was belt comes from a silent source.

turers have got a good fright. They have been warned, year after year, of the folly of trusting to any one nation for a supply. All remes in their power now were at their command ton years since, yet they neg ected them. Even still there is a lucking hope that, either by compromise or conquest, the civil war will be ended so as to give us southern cotton yet at a cheap rate. Among others, the following struck our favey as deserving record: "I was," said the reverend gentleman, attending divine service in Norfolk, several years ago, during a season of some exseveral years ago, during as a son of some ex-citement. While the officiating clergyman 20.000 LARGE AND SMALL was in the midst of a most interesting discussion, an old lady among the congregation arose, clapped her hands, and exclaimed "Merciful father, if I had one more feather in my wing of faith, I would fly off to glory." The worthy gentleman thus interrupted, immediately replied: "Good Lord, stick it in, and let her go; she's but a trouble here!" That quieted the old lady.

As ene of the Dover, English, volunteers were passing along, rifle in hand, he was accessed by a proceeding urchin, who eafled out: "Who shot the deg?"
